Marc Goncher is a husband and father of three boys, ages 14, 11, and 8, who lives in the Morningside neighborhood of Atlanta, Georgia. Marc works as the Environmental, Safety and Sustainability Legal Counsel for The Coca-Cola Company. Prior to joining Coke, he served in the City of Atlanta Law Department for 12 years, a large portion of which was spent advising the City on compliance with the Clean Water Act. Marc eventually became the Deputy City Attorney that managed the finance legal team, advised the City Council, and reported directly to the City Attorney. He also served as an Assistant Attorney General for the Georgia Attorney General Office's Environmental Section and started his legal career working in private practice in Savannah, Georgia. Marc grew up in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, D.C., and came to Atlanta in 1993 to attend Emory University, staying to attend Emory Law. Since his arrival in Georgia he has managed to travel to many parts of the state, helped by his participation in the 2011 Class of the Institute for Georgia Environmental Leadership. Marc enjoys backyard birding and incorporating bird watching and enjoyment of nature into family vacations. An avid bird photographer, Marc's favorite bird that can be found in Georgia is the Ruby-throated Hummingbird.
